ABSTRACT

Web based client-server systems with thin client architecture. More specifically, it relates to a method and system for transferring service requests and responses to the requests between a thin client and an enterprise server in a client-server system.

5   Preferably the interconnection is a persistent interconnection.

61.